

Kjetil Rå Hauge is an Assistant Professor emeritus at the Department of Literature, Area Studies and European Languages of the University of Oslo and one of the most eminent foreign scholars of Bulgarian with long-standing research interests and vast teaching experience in the fields of Bulgarian language and linguistics, Balkan studies, comparative linguistics, pragmatics, corpus linguistics and computational linguistics. His research has led to the publication of A Short Grammar of Contemporary Bulgarian (1999) and the co-authored Dictionary of Turkisms in Bulgarian (2002). Kjetil Rå Hauge takes special interest in the linguistic features of spoken and colloquial Bulgarian and has co-authored a course in Colloquial Bulgarian for beginners (2006). He has been part of different corpus compilation projects, such as the corpus of colloquial Bulgarian compiled under the BgSpeech initiative and the parallel Run(-Euro) Corpus. For his contribution to the study and promotion of Bulgarian linguistics Kjetil Rå Hauge has received twice the Gold Badge Award of the Institute for Bulgarian Language at the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences.